Code ideas

- Morse code tied in a string with knots for dots and ½ toothpicks for dashes. (and a start here sign)

- Written code: small v's to write a message:

    S   O   S   I   N E E D   H   E   L   P

Small v above line = dot; large v above line = dash; small v below line is break between letters; large v below line is break between words

Variation - short tooth for dot, long tooth for dash, short flat line between letters, space between words. (on a page from lone leaders trng - no 181)

- Use dried peas and matches to physically make the morse alphabet - He is Tom - uses all the letters with just dots or just dashes.

- A crossword with the clues/words in semaphore or morse

- Morse time - 1.00 = A; 2.00 = B etc to 12.00 = M; minutes are AA = 1.05; AB = 1.10;
Minutes in between the 5s are represented by R(6) S(7) W(8) X(9) eg AAR = 1.06

- Make a signal lamp / buzzer

- Code wheels

- Notes on a music stave: a-g is one type of note eg crochet; a-g in minims is actually h-n; a-g a third time in semi-breves is n-t; a-g a fourth time in quavers is u-z; one bar per word; rest symbol for end of sentence.

- Use clock time to indicate semaphore letters 6.07 = E

- Lemon juice writing

- Writing on an egg with vinegar, then hard boiling to retrieve the message June 1999 meeting possibly

- Use a wing dings font and just type!

- A Dragon can write these symbols with his 3 claws. Why not use Dragon writing as the basis of a wide game! Code breaking can be fun! The symbol before the "a" signifies the next letter is a capital.
